Daniel Reports

WASHINGTON - News sources here in your Nation's Capitol continue to mislead the American people. Earlier this week, I was invited to the White House, along with several other Members, and the news stories which resulted from the visit were totally inaccurate in reporting the purpose of the meeting.

While there, I had an opportunity to talk personally with the President for a few minutes. He looked quite well, and seemed as relaxed as a naturally introverted man is likely to look.

We often hear it said that, while the Commonwealth has had an illustrious past, she no longer contributes her sons and daughters to positions of national prominence. Last weekend, I met just about the proudest pair of parents you can hope to see, in the persons of Mr. and Ms. Hester L. Clark, of Meherrin in Lunenburg County. There can be few people in the nation today who have not heard - or heard of - their son, Roy Clark, co-host of television's popular program "Hee-Haw".

Mr. and Mrs. Clark were in attendance at the annual meeting of the Southside Electric Cooperative in Crewe, where we learned even more fine things about this organization which provides a vital service to 18 Virginia counties, most of which are in the Fifth District.

It is my intention to recommend that Roy Clark's contributions to conservation, Americanism, and other worthwhile causes, as well as his talents in providing wholesome entertainment for the entire family, be recognized by his native state.

Also in Crewe last weekend attending the same meeting were Chuck and Lynda Bird Johnson Robb. I had an interesting conversation with Lynda Bird regarding the Democratic Presidential Nominating Convention of 1960. I attended as Senator Harry F. Byrd, Sr., 's alternate, and at his request headed up the effort to secure the nomination for Mr. Johnson.

Ralph Nader says that a Member of Congress should not be an advocate of the people he represents. With this I do not agree. We employ staff and maintain offices for that specific purpose. To help us do a faster and more efficient job, it would be helpful to have certain information at the time a request for assistance is made.

Normally, a passport can be obtained through regular channels in three to four weeks. However, emergencies do arise, or red tape ensnaris, and it becomes feasible to contact this office for assistance in expediting. Before a passport can be processed, it must include a completed application form and proper fee, two photographs, and proof of birth. If a birth certificate is not available, a baptismal certificate, school record, or affadavit by an older relative will suffice.

This office will of course want to help in any appropriate way with these matters, and these suggestions are offered to expedite resolution of such problems as may arise.

What Our Symbol Means to You

We hope you like our new Independent Community Bank symbol. We think it says a lot about us and what we try to be.

The Liberty Bell suggests independence—independence from outside control, free to serve our community with a total dedication to local needs, without a large holding company or chain operation telling us what to do.

The buildings in the symbol suggest the community. That's what we serve: the community. The scope of our activity is not worldwide, nationwide or statewide. We concentrate on the community in which we live.

The shield suggests the strength of the American banking system, reinforced by our commitment to the community. Out of our local independence, our concern for the community, comes a special kind of banking for you, personal and deeply committed to your financial wellbeing. Remember, you're an important part of us.

ACHS Students Attended Governor's School For Gifted

by Rita Inge

Early on Monday morning, June 18, I left for our state capital, Richmond, Virginia. My destination was the University of Richmond, where I registerd as a participant in the 1973 Governor's School for the Gifted. This was the first such school ever held in the state of Virginia and it was made up of three different areas of study at three different colleges. 134 other students and I studied the fine arts in our part of the school in Richmond.

There was a choice of nine different classes or "disciplines", two of which I could select to study for the four weeks of the school. The classes included creative writing, filmmaking, dance, drama, photography, studio art, printmaking, ceramics, and weaving. Even though I could only study two classes in depth, I was exposed to all the others and learned a lot from observation and listening.

A day's activities were very much the same throughout the whole month. Each morning all the students boarded busses at the University of Richmond and went to the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, where the majority of the classes were held. Usually we first met in the Theatre of the Museum where we were given instructions for special events of the day by the program's director, Mr. William Gaston. Then broke up into our classes and met for about three hours until we went to lunch. After lunch, we went into our second classes and again met for about three hours. In the afternoon, we once more boarded busses and went back to the University of Richmond where we ate dinner and got ready for the evening's activities.

The whole school was very informal, which made it a lot freer than a regular school. There were no grades, no tests to study for, and no homework. The teachers were more like fellow students who lent a helping hand and tried not to force you into doing something. For example, in my studio art class, I could create paintings by using both tempera and acrylic paints, or by using crayons and turpentine. I could also make collages or stuff designs on pillow or wall hangings.

Most of the nights were filled with seeing different things around Richmond that were of interest to us. We saw three movies and several ballets, heard several choirs and symphonies, and attended numerous plays and musicals. Our nights which had no special plans were spent at the University of Richmond. The Robins Center offered many enjoyable sports, and free nights were used for resting, too. A trip to Williamsburg took up our first week end and the second week end was spent at Washington, D. C. We had special activities planned at each city.

The Governor's School for the Gifted was a very valuable experience to me. It broadened my outlook on my place in my home and community, and I hope that I can serve Appomattox better because of it. I thank all the people of Appomattox who helped send to school and supported me while I was there. Since the first Governor's School for the Gifted was a success, it will be continued in the future, and I hope there will be others from our county to enjoy it also.

by Bryan Seiz

"I arrived at the Mary Baldwin Center of the Virginia Governor's School this summer with mixed feelings as to what the experience would be like. What developed over the next four weeks exceeded my expectations more than I would have believed.

"The first thing they did at our orientation meeting was to tell us that we were there for one reason: to give us a chance, if we so desired, to work and live on a level not available in the high school program. This included a personal rapport with the professors, use of college facilities, and most important, to work in an atmosphere of freedom. Some of the instructors had some experience in high school methods, and they seemed to be more t... ed with teaching in that situation than we were in learning from it.

"The aspect of the program which perhaps left the most lasting impression upon us was the association of people who tended to think alike. There was a unity among the students which was not surprising, considering that they had been working together, living together, playing sports together, and even suffering together, o c a s i o nally, for weeks.

"The activities varied from watching open air Shakespeare to talks with prominent journalists to advanced physics lab work to an interesting midnight walk down a mountain side. The curriculum seemed to satisfy everybody without being limiting or too broad.

"As I mentioned before, the program was a great experience in my eyes, and it was very underated at its outset. The Virginia Department of Education has come upon a very successful idea, as my views represent those of all other Governor's School students with whom I am in contact."

HOLIDAY LAKE STILL OPEN - BUT NOT FOR SWIMMING

Holiday Lake is still open to the public but not for swimming.

Boats are still being rented at the lake for fishing or pleasure, sail boats are still being rented as well as canoes and paddle boats.

With the pretty weather still in store for us, citizens just might want to make a trip down to the lake for a day of fun.
